

Britain's brilliant writer, G. K. Chesterton, costumed to portray the character of Tony Weller, the coachman, in Dickens' famous "Pickwick Papers"—a rôle which the trenchant essayist's build and physiognomy assist him to fill in true histrionic style.

The Republican nominee for President, Senator Warren G. Harding, takes off his coat and renews his acquaintance with the make-up of the type forms in the composing room of his Ohio newspaper, "The Marion Star."

One of the modern wonders of the world, the Gatun Locks of the Panama Canal, looking east as viewed from a navy seaplane. Gatun Lake is in the foreground, Limon Bay and the Caribbean Sea beyond. The great triple locks lift vessels passing through the canal the eighty-five feet from sea level to Gatun Lake.

To be Queen of Asbury Park's thirtieth annual baby parade on the last day of August—little Miss Ila Hopkins, twelve-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hopkins, of the second largest resort on the Jersey coast.

From the crowded East Side tenements and streets (on the left) to Southampton, you ask? Well, not exactly there, but we'll admit that after two weeks of sunshine, fresh air, good food and care-free playtime this happy splashing group of Tribune Fresh Air youngsters pictured above might easily be mistaken for a row of millionaire kiddies. Tired "little mothers" and overworked "newsies"—thousands of them are in need of just such a vacation as The Tribune Fresh Air Fund makes possible through the generosity of its subscribers. But the need always far exceeds the means of handling it—that's why checks to swell the fund are always welcome.
